++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A windy and showery day, with Highland wettest.

Today:
Brisk west to northwest winds will push frequent showers across the country, with outbreaks heaviest and most prolonged across the Highlands and Islands. Best of the shelter expected across Fife, Lothian and Borders, where brighter spells increasing through the afternoon.

Tonight:
Northwest winds will hold the bulk of remaining showers across the Northwest, and to a less extent Northeast, with the majority from Central Belt southwards staying dry with clear spells.

Tuesday:
Weather improving with showers lighter, less frequent and largely focused across the north of the country. Most staying dry with good bright and sunny spells from Central Belt southwards.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Wednesday, Thursday mainly dry, bright with the few scattered showers largely confined across the north. Winds brisk northerly Wednesday, easing and backing northwest Friday as patchy rain spreads from northwest.
